LANDRACE San Antonio, Texas

Five-time James Beard Awards finalist Steve McHugh opened Landrace at Hyatt's Thompson San Antonio-Riverwalk hotel to work with heritage growers close to home, sourcing from 20 local producers and farmers who cultivate top-quality ingredients in the region. Enjoy the finest seasonal dishes, honoring the treasured tastes and flavors of Texas. And save room for dessert because your sweet tooth will swoon after one look at the scrumptious carrot cake. landracetx.com

AUDREY

Nashville, Tennessee

Chef Sean Brock is a force to be reckoned with not only in the Nashville food scene but in the entire South's restaurant industry. That's why, when he decided to open Audrey, foodies everywhere had their eyes anxiously on him once again. The restaurant is named for his beloved maternal grandmother and puts Sean's celebrated attention to detail on display. The constantly rotating menu is a celebration of Audrey's Appalachian roots and is always packed with classic Southern fare. audreynashville.com

Southern Tastemakers We Love

ANGELA PERSICKE & MARK PERLIONI

This creative team had very different takes on cooking when they first met. Mark bought cookbooks and watched cooking shows as a teenager while Angela's interest in cooking was sparked after seeing Mark's passion for it. One thing they always shared, however, was a love for wine. So, when they started the Cooking with Wine blog, it was simply a way to creatively explore their interests. Its success has been a welcome surprise and even encouraged the duo to step away from their full-time careers. They've committed to this journey entirely and recently coauthored their first cookbook, Mangiama. Be sure to follow along on their journey because it's sure to be a delicious one.
